Once, an unfortunate comment was made to me:
"You seem like you're made of glass:
too fragile and so easily broken!"
Glass is
fragile,
indeed.
But what if,
by chance,
we handle it
with more care?
Feelings are
like that too,
delicate.
I feel everything like an open wound.
Even the wind can hurt me.

I carry within me
a hurricane—
a complex dance
of extremes.
I am wind,
I am water,
I am movement.
I run...

...and only I find myself again,
in an endless cycle.
...from myself...

The brightside, however,
is that those who feel intensely, often carry empathy as a burning flame.

This kind of being sees beyond words, reads
between silences, and understands what is —essentially—
invisible to the eyes.
—The acceptance
of my intensity.
It's okay to be intense.
There's beauty in it.
